How we summarise this area of action...

...developing a preventative approach to alcohol misuse by improving the quality, consistency of information and education by targeting those most at risk of causing harm to themselves, their families and others through their drinking.

We therefore need to be good at applying public health evidence particularly behaviour change; working across the life course, understanding the true nature of the problem and responding appropriately.

Information to help you understand this theme:

- Marmot life course approach (see handout)
- The determinants of health and well-being Barton and Grant 2010 (see handout)

What's covered well:

Identification and Brief Advice workforce development

What are the gaps from original plan?

- Coordination of key stakeholders who are committed to prevention theme
- Focus on workplaces alcohol policies and work with occupational health
- Systematic and consistent primary prevention messages to specific target groups
- Social marketing approach to campaigns targeted and specific not universal
- Better understand the risk taking behaviour of higher education students including alcohol
- Social norms programmes of work in secondary schools
- Focus on family approach in primary schools through family services
- Social norms work with two universities and Newcastle College
